Ashland is a true jewel in the heart of Lexington and all are welcome to experience its rich history and natural beauty

Each year thousands of visitors from all over our city, state, country and world enjoy Ashland, Henry Clay's beloved Estate, touring the historic 19th century home filled with Clay family artifacts and strolling through the 17 acres of gardens, grounds and walking trails lined with magnificent old trees.

Thousands of school children visit and learn about Kentucky heritage. Families with children of all ages play on the grounds during each of the beautiful and ever-changing seasons.

But it takes hard work by many and your financial support to preserve Ashland, which receives no city, state or government funding and is operated by a non-profit foundation.

Become a Friend of Ashland, and join the team that supports Kentucky's history by preserving Henry Clay's legacy for generations to come.
